Dear Twitter Human Resources Department,

I am writing to apply for the Twitter Entry Level Software Developer position. I am undergraduate student graduating from Loyola Marymount University(LMU) in May of 2014 with a double degree in Electrical Engineering and Computer Science. This double degree demonstrates my time management abilities, as this is a combination that has never been completed in 4 years at my university, as well as my versatility in technical fields. In addition to my coursework, I have had plenty of hands on experience including an internship at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, an LMU research project developing a nuclear fusor, and software development job at Datapop Inc designing web tools for data analysis. I have had experience working in small groups at Datapop and have had experience working alone in at JPL. I also have had experience with leadership and teamwork as I am the captain of the LMU rowing team which involves a significant amount of organizational skills and a 25+ hour/week commitment.

I have accomplished a lot in my college career in a variety of fields, but now I am ready to commit my full potential to one specialty so I believe that I would be real asset to Twitter. I am happy to answer any questions you might have. I would be willing to arrange an interview, and can be reached at RobQThames@gmail.com or at 314-578-6698. I look forward to hearing from you.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Quin Thames
